Mobile, AL - Arrival Systems, Inc. (Mobile, AL), CCPlus, Inc. (Syracuse, NY) and The Joseph Company (St. Louis, MO) formally announced that they have entered into a strategic partnership designed to create a nationwide network of technology integrators.

The new business unit, National Systems Integrators (NSI), began operations in May 2007 and will provide technology manufacturers with a qualified network of integration specialists to install and maintain their products. By outsourcing these services, technology manufacturers can help offset shrinking margins in today's extremely competitive environment.

"The blending of our combined experience and territories will bring a powerful force to the technology field that will help to integrate many new solutions in the healthcare arena as well as several other vertical markets." said C.J. Ezell, President of Arrival Systems. "By standardizing our processes and methodology, we can provide any vendor with an extremely cost effective solution for field deployment of their product."

The companies first began negotiations in Q2 2006 and formally finalized their agreement in May 2007. The organization will be headquartered in St. Louis, MO.
